
HELP ME OUT PLEASE - Shutterstock is being harsh

Posted by SKLC - 2007/03/29 20:03

I'm sorry to bother you but in an attempt to get shutterstock to listen to me I'm trying to contact some shutterstock or not users and ask them for their help.

I had my account suspended and then deleted due to a misunderstanding on my part.

I had submitted to a traffic site the referral and didn't know it was a breach as in the terms and conditions they refer to it as a paid to click site, and I didn't know it was that because I didn't pay nor was paid to have the referral there, so it was a simple misunderstanding. And I won't repeat it again, all I want it to get my account back. I didn't even get any referrals from the site that I know of. I wasn't even getting anything from referrals. I already had about forty something dollars over 50 images submitted, and I was loyal to the site submitting most my images there and ignoring the others I was on.

I've tried contacting shutterstock but they ignore me or say they redirected the case and then ignore me.

I just wanted people to write to them for me maybe or anything as maybe if enough people write to them I'll get them to listen to me as they are being very harsh. All I need is some time and comprehension from them.

I used part of this message for a petition I started hope they don't ignore my effort!

<http://www.ipetitions.com/petition/shutterstock/> please sign my petition to get them to listen to me.

If you write to them my forum nick was SKLC and login was sheara@netmadeira.com

Thanks for your time and comprehension I do appreciate any help! I do hope this works!

Just comes to show how hard work is repaid!

I don't know about you, but they seem to be real cutthroats. Seems they treat you and others like trash. I won't deal with snakes like them!

Good luck - hope you don't get bitten by the snake again!
